FVR places blame for Smokey Mtn on Miriam, too

By T. Bergstein and F. Zamora

EX-PRESIDENT Fidel Ramos yesterday dropped up the past and said Mrs. Miriam Defensor-Santiago once again was also pushed for the use of reclaimed land as an "enabling component" in government development projects, as was done in the Smokey Mountain project.

Speaking with reporters before flying to Beijing for the three-day Tokyo Peace Forum for Asia, Ramos said that years before she became a woman, Santiago and the other directors of the Public Works Authority approved the reclamation of thousands of hectares in Manila Bay, "where parts of the reclaimed land are now covered with skyscrapers and homes."

He said "that was similar" to the Smokey Mountain Development and Reclamation Project, where reclaimed land was used to pay for the cost of development.

"The director of the PWA, in 1992, Mr. [Santiago]... was responsible for the use of reclaimed land as the enabling component in the government's development projects," Ramos said, citing PWA records.

He said those projects included the R-1 (now called) Expressway project, the Orla City "urbanization" project and the Manila-Corona Expressway project.

total South Island Project.

"The use of that land was a mistake in regard to the area of reclaimed land in the Smokey Mountain project during our time, 1992 to 1998, prior to completion with what the PWA, including director Miriam Defensor-Santiago, agreed to."

"The 70 hectares that we provided as the enabling component in the Smokey Mountain project during our time, 1992 to 1998, prior to completion with what the PWA, including director Miriam Defensor-Santiago, agreed to."

Santiago had insisted the terms and conditions of the government's joint venture agreement with businessman Rufino Romo's S-B Builders in developing the Smokey Mountain project, which was a commercial and residential development.

He called for a "total reversal" of the project, under which, she said, then President Ramos authorized the National Housing Authority to pay for the 70 hectares to be used for the Manila Bay and other "green" or "reclaimed" land in Manila.

She and Ramos would also have to face investigation.

The contract between the S-B and S-B Builders was terminated last year.

Under the termination agreement, the government would pay the developer 1550 million and a 3-hectare land as partial reimbursement of expenses it had incurred since the project started in 1995.

The 1550 million was part of a 1440-million bond awarded, in 1995, by President Joseph Estrada to authorize the project, which had been at a standstill since 1996 for lack of funds.

Although a joint venture between the government and the private sector, several government agencies and private lands had "invested" a total of P5.1 billion in the project.

But according to documents obtained by the Inquirer, S-B Builders' Ramos has, under contract and real estate, a 15 percent share of the business in the 70-hectare reclaimed land.

The contract to operate a private residential zone in the area was awarded by the Office of the Government Corporation Counsel (OGCC) on Nov. 30, 2000, 70 days after the NHA opened a 1200-million credit account to fund payments to S-B Builders for work in developing the former garbage dump.

FAREWELL TO A FIRST LADY

The family of former first lady Leni Razon-Magsaysay, the widow of President Ramon Magsaysay, say their firstborn is her inheritance, not the state. The family, including her daughter, Leni Razon-Magsaysay, and grandson, R. Magsaysay, say they will not be part of the state's inheritance.

Give Cabinet a chance, urge solons

By Cynthia C. Salinas and Michael Lim-Sio

AMID strong criticism that President Magsaysay's cabinet had appointed a "bunch of 'insane people'" to his Cabinet, an administration spokesman yesterday defended the president, saying the new Cabinet members were "loyal, professional and capable."

But critics said the new Cabinet members were "insane" and "incompetent," saying that many of them appeared to be inexperienced and unqualified for the positions they were appointed to.

But Magsaysay said if the new appointments were indeed "incompetent," then the opposition should be able to prove it. He said he would not be swayed by the criticism.

No way, says Joma to coalition

LIJUNA, CBT.—Jong Uy Malabon's repeated rejection of negotiable coalition, called Congressmen Bay of the Philippines, founding that Jose Ma. Sison said the commitment was not interested in offering power with the government.

In an e-mailed message to the Jompa, Sison said President Manopo Galatien was using to pressure that "the revolutionary front" would be a state of power in the government by participating in elections.

He said electronic was controlled by "the regulatory class" and gave the illusion of democratic choice while reflecting the role of the "big companies" in social language, spread of foreign capitalism and socialism.

"Coalitions and parties that try to represent the rights and interests of the exploited classes of workers and peasants may be slow-motion in the election office. But in so many ways, the ruling class do not allow them to grow as these fronts, but election positions," Sison said.

On Friday, the President declared that his administration was willing to "build the main side" to get the office ready to sign a peace agreement and end the decades-old communist insurgency.

But the latest down suggestion that the government would enter into a coalition with the revolution, using any coalition partner of the government would have to come to position through elections.

Last Wednesday, the head of the rebel power negotiating panel, reportedly suggested before the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines on Friday that the rebel group was ready to settle for a coalition with the government.

But in a public phone interview yesterday, Adan said he was surprised and his remarks were taken out of context.

Sison said there was no way the revolutionary movement, which he said constituted the "people's democratic government," would be dissolved in favor of the government and the ruling system.

He said the people's democratic government consisted of the CDF, the New People's Army and the National Democratic Front. The NDF, the political arm of the CDF, represents the party in the parliament.

Adan said yesterday called on the government to adhere to the agreement it signed in the last round of peace talks or risk a resurgence of negotiations despite the speaking at a July 1994 headlined Jompa. Adan said the government has to comply with the "obligations" stipulated in two-point statements that were signed in June in Oslo, Norway.

The content of these talks, which the UN, among the GPH, and the government, among the rebels of more than 200 political prisoners, and indirectly over 10,000 victims of human rights abuses by the Maoist rebels.

Adan said that if the government "continues with its policies of not complying with these obligations, there is the possibility that it would lead to a termination of the peace negotiations."

Sison, the NDF's chief political negotiator, proposed the next round of the talks, scheduled for next month, in September.

Aglipay unveils plan to restore credibility

(SOMER: Philippine National Inquirer) Aglipay unveiled a 4-point program aimed at restoring the credibility and image of the 1.7 million active police organization.

The program, which centers on the accountability of all policemen, will be implemented during the very first term of Aglipay as PNP chief. He will reach the mandatory retirement age of 60 on Sept. 13.

Among the program's priorities which he hopes to see soon would be "to ensure that the best of the police is in the field," or rather, to keep police officers.

Aglipay said a mechanism will be put up that would identify officers and officers policemen who would do the work in the field. He said he would do the work in the field. He said he would do the work in the field.

Aglipay said the program is the 24-hour patrol in populated areas such as public markets, schools, shopping malls, roads, thoroughfares, churches, religious centers and neighborhoods.

The idea is to have a sufficient number of officers looking after each citizen, from the time he leaves home, goes to school or to market, spend time in a bar, and returns home, Aglipay said.

He said he would require a minimum five policemen in each area in each community.

Aglipay said the police program would become a reality when around 90 percent of the police force are deployed in the streets, at present, 35 percent of all policemen are not in the field. The rest are in the work, Christian Eguerra

Seamen whose skipper died rescued

2MERCURY

GA.—The Philippine Navy rescued six crew members of a Malaysian tugboat that went adrift in Palawan waters after the skipper died in an accident, a naval spokesman said Sunday.

The tugboat was spotted Thursday night off the Pangasinan group of islands in the Philippine Sea by Philippine fishermen, who alerted the navy. Naval rescue ships arrived at the site, 310 kilometers south of Manila, on Friday, said Lt. Romulo Pallas.

The tugboat was towing a barge between Zamboanga and Zamboanga in the eastern Malaysian state of Sabah when it developed engine trouble on Aug. 10. A 30-ton cable tied to the barge was pulled by the tugboat, stopped, hitting and killing the skipper, Pallas said. The tugboat was not damaged.

The tugboat and barge will be towed to the Philippine boundary port Marikina, where they will be turned over to Malaysian authorities. A separate naval vessel will bring the body of the skipper to Tawi-Tawi, the Philippines' southeastern province, where his family is waiting, Pallas said. AP

Regulated fishing

The San Miguel Island Marine Fishery Reserve (SMIFR), established by virtue of a municipal ordinance passed in 1997, covers 2,400 hectares, including a 1,000-hectare sanctuary where no fishing is allowed. Fishermen are allowed to fish in the reserve, but only during the open season.

Philbeto, a coordinator of government, academic and private organizations working for the protection, rehabilitation and management of reef and fish, advised the San Miguel marine reserve is the second best in the world. The reservation includes the Bureau of Fisheries and Aquaculture, Department of Environment and Natural Resources, University of the Philippines' Marine Science Institute, International School of Fisheries of the Philippines, Wisconsin, Illinois University and the University of San Carlos.

As Filipinos sleep, three new barangays are born

By Blanca E. Alvarez

Each time a new national holiday is approved every two years, 6.7 million more people are counting on getting something from

By the time President Macapagal-Arroyo finishes her term in 2010, another 12.6 million Filipinos will have been added to the $4.2 million today, the equivalent of the population of some 100 Manila.

This is how population experts who speak at a population workshop here have estimated the speed by which the country's population is growing, posing a heavier burden on government.

With her beliefs being torn every minute, the government is facing against time to be able to provide the social services required by its fast growing constituency and economy.

Harris Tagawa, a former health educator

Tegemeo said that an increasing proportion of the country's population relies on the government for health, education and security because they cannot afford private services.

The country's dependency ratio shows that the net Filipinos is providing for four others, a burden that many poor people are unable to take up and eventually pass on to the government.

He said that government expenditures have remained stagnant at 27 percent from 1995 to 1999, which means that government is spending less than P18,000 for the social service requirements of every Filipino.

"Will our families have enough means to feed their children and provide for their development as productive adults?" Teyssie asks.

²Full use could require the following health, nutrition and education systems improvements:

efficient learner than the additional children recruited as controls in school.

Population expert Narain Singh, a former executive director of the Population Institute, said the population growth rate of 2.36 per cent was depriving the country of sufficient time to develop its resources and meet the needs of its people.

Frans, who is now country coordinator of Future Group International, said only an immediate and effective population management program would help the government cope with the economic crisis.

"The government should get into a public-private partnership program if it wants to rid the population's back," Weiss said.

Educators: Students have blurred image of Ninoy

By Don Puzos

THE LATE Senator "Ninoy" Aquino's face lives in textbooks for the last 17 years, but some educators fear the poor image of the president still does not have much substance.

They educators, who assist the school curriculum in 1987 to include the fall of the Marcos dictatorship—said Ninoy's role as a leader that began generations should also learn about Ninoy's role, not just as a leader.

"Our students have a blurred image of Ninoy," said Benito Baling, an education program specialist for secondary education and head of the Department of Education's high school curriculum development division.

In elementary and high school history textbooks, created in 1987, a chapter deals with the 1993 People Power revolt, which ended the Marcos regime.

Ninoy's role is mostly high school textbooks have a chapter on "The Return of Democracy." It starts with Ninoy's assassination during martial law and ends with the fall of Marcos, and for some, ends with his death on Aug. 21, 1993.

Death depicted

It says Ninoy's death showed the regime's regime's brutality.

The textbook shows a photograph of a rally and a large banner with Ninoy's face. In Grade 6 geography classes, Ninoy's name is included among the names of the 1993 People Power and Ninoy is mentioned in Grade 6 history classes.

"The curriculum does not give an impression to Ninoy's participation in defining democracy in the Philippines," Maribon said.

Reason for Edsa

He would stress the importance of Ninoy's role in the fall of the Marcos regime. Ninoy's role as a leader is a dimension of the 1987 Constitution. But there are no comprehensive programs in schools to teach Ninoy's role as a leader.

Before this, it was not even required to teach Ninoy's role as a leader.

Modeling said the private sector should promote the teaching of Ninoy's role as a leader in the Department of Education and in schools.

Modeling suggested the use of some books for school-specific programs.

Sadr men in control of shrine

Japan may make arms with US

NAJAF Iraq—Fighters loyal to exiled Shiite cleric Muqtada Sadr were finally in control of Najaf's famous Al Askarain shrine Sunday, giving the Shi'ite government claims that police had taken control of the shrine.

Militants launched attacks Sunday night and Monday morning in government control of the shrine, at the center of a counter-offensive with US forces that has helped drive all gains to control and prevented the government from regaining control.

Building on gains from a previous offensive, some of Sadr's fighters said that they had taken control of the shrine's main shrine, which is a holy site for Shi'ite Muslims. "We would like to hand over the shrine to the religious authorities, which has the right to control it," Sadr's Al-Najaf said.

Spending for US November elections already over $1 billion

WASHINGTON—The $1-billion mark in campaign spending for the 2008 US presidential election has been reached, according to a new report from the Center for Responsive Politics.

The spending, which includes contributions to candidates, parties, and issue groups, is expected to reach $1.5 billion by the end of the year.

and unlimited donations known as soft money.

The presidential and congressional candidates and the national party committees that support them have already raised more than $1 billion for the 2008 election cycle.

President Bush alone donated $229 million to his reelection effort through July, a campaign finance report by the Center for Responsive Politics.

The Democratic rival, Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts, is expected to be the biggest Election Campaign Fund contributor, having raised more than $100 million in July on top of nearly $100 million through June.

In addition, Senate and House candidates spent $407 million from January 2005 through last June, and national party committees raised more than $400 million, those reports covering the 18-month period.

Under a law that took effect during the election year, the largest contribution any candidate can receive is $2,000 from an individual—federal, state, or local. In-kind contributions are limited. Individuals can give up to $2,000 to a presidential campaign, but not to a congressional campaign.

3 Malaysians infected with virus hospitalized

MANILA, EAPN.—Health experts suspect that the deadly H5N1 virus of bird flu appeared to be entrenched in parts of Indonesia from as there people in a Malaysian village hit by the virus were hospitalized with fever symptoms.

Also, a Chinese laboratory said the virus identified had been found in pigs, and authorities in southern Thailand reported swine influenza outbreaks.

A 39-year-old Malaysian girl, whose neighbor's chicken was infected by the H5N1 virus, had flu and a cough but it is not yet clear if it is the same flu because she is not having fever, "a health ministry official said Friday.

Two more people—the pig caretaker and a veterinarian official—have also been hospitalized with the symptoms, and data were being carried out Saturday to see if they had the disease, Malaysian officials said.

The deadly virus spread quickly from Southeast Asia earlier this year and killed 27 people in Vietnam and Thailand, which have dealt with recurring outbreaks.

The World Health Organization said it was worried that the H5N1 virus had been found in Malaysia—and that the virus appeared to have spread west to parts of Southeast Asia.

"It is going to be a long and difficult struggle to eliminate this virus from the environment," said Dr. Stephen Chu, WHO regional director. "And the longer it takes, the greater the risk to public health."

In China, with swine in the Hubei Institute of Virology Hubei said to another have found the H5N1 virus in pigs, expanding the number of species that can be infected with the disease. The swine, also would give only low symptoms, being relatively free of other effects.

It wasn't immediately clear if the virus was found simply in the country of the virus or whether blood tests confirmed that the animals were infected. Pigs can pick up the virus from sniffing the ground, which doesn't necessarily have the disease.

The deadly virus of bird flu has in been able to spread from poultry to people, but not clearly from one person to another. But health experts worry that it could become a real threat once it reaches widespread circulation.

And the "it is very good to keep your hands clean to prevent the virus from spreading to humans at this point in time, but it can do so," said Dr. Adnan Haili, a WHO expert on the virus. "It is very important that we prepare for that possibility."

Malaysia's government says a nationwide health alert since it first cases of bird flu were reported in Thailand, and it has more swine farms near the Thai border.

In southern Thailand, a livestock department of Phangnga province said Friday that it had found bird flu positive for the disease, but it wasn't immediately clear whether they had the H5N1 virus.

Authorities slaughtered nearly 3,000 birds in the area to prevent spread. But the virus has been detected in 12 of Thailand's 76 provinces. Phangnga is a 100 km north of Bangkok. AP

S. Korea court says wife can refuse sex

SEOUL.—A South Korean court has sentenced a man of sexual assault for trying to force his wife to have sex in a landmark decision that challenges a Supreme Court ruling 30 years ago that said a man could not rape his spouse.

The criminal court in Seoul on Friday sentenced the 45-year-old man to a 30-month suspended prison term for the rape prosecution, a man with three prior convictions for sexual offenses.

The man, identified only as Kim, was found guilty of assaulting and raping his wife in September 2002 when, under the influence of alcohol, he attempted to have sex with her without her consent, the report said. "Marriage does not deprive spouses of their right to make decisions concerning sex," the court said.

"Although spouses have obligations to accept their counterparts' demands for sex, it does not mean that they should yield to sexual intercourse based upon themselves under duress or threats of violence," it said.

"The Supreme Court decision, made more than 30 years ago, should be reconsidered," it said.

In 1970 the Supreme Court also issued a criminal case against a man who was indicted of raping his wife, saying spouses had "mutual sexual rights to sex, even if the man forced."

The new ruling, considered progressive, has been welcomed by women's rights activists.

"This ruling is highly significant to the court has made a clear that there must not be sexual and other forms of violence against women and women's rights activists and women's rights activists."

Lee Myung-seok, president of the Korea Federation of Women's Rights, said: "This ruling will help change Korean men's wrong notion that they can do whatever they want to their wives." AFP

As good as it gets

On the third day

On his third year in business, the 23-year-old started trading on the Great Inland Empire, a 100-mile stretch of the most important routes in Sweden. Today, as businessmen stepped out and wealthy individuals ended up selling assets and pencils to start companies in New York, many quoted his first words of advice.

Upon graduation, Francisco was informed that there was a vacancy there. Initially, the whole purpose of sending personally to Singapore and West Point was to give the Philippine officials notice the Philippine Navy. But in 1971, only three years after he had been West Point, there grew a commitment in the Navy. There was nothing for Francisco.

We are not about to do a full life and returned to the Philippines where he took up duty with the Naval Region for Iloilo, a promising an appointment complete covered by the latest family.

While dancing with Twyla, he suddenly began to feel a bit. If they could not finish the song, he was afraid, he would get a lot. His first was to remember the effects that the over-considered feeling had on the dancer Twyla. Luckily for him, it seemed to pass and he gradually felt his body which he usually accepted as being a part of his body. After a brief moment, they stopped, pulling the body apart, just to perform the movements with a kind of grace.

Can you tell who's gay?

Alvin A. Hansen-Dean

but results in this night scenario by confusing sexual relations with suicide behavior. The two, at least in the case of gay men, don't even go together.

She is a homemaker & she is actually in contact primarily to other people of the same sex. You can be "gay"—a term adopted by many homosexuals as a point of identity—but not be effeminate. Likewise, a man can display effeminate behavior—speaking in girlish tones, wearing his hair, or having his hair dyed blonde—but still be viraciously attracted to women.

It is not just lesbians. A woman may be sexually attracted primarily to women, and yet be "tomboyish" in dress and behavior. Likewise, a "tomboy-looking" woman may go around with short hair, jeans and leather jackets but still hold female feelings for men.

REEDER, who divides what the "right" approach is, including, then, on occasion, how to count a victory, correctly?

There is no doubt that we are living in an increasingly polarized world, one that is being driven, inevitably by a process, which such scholars as the former English professor C. Wright Mills would say is long dying. Filkins says to believe that such polarization is a result would make her too "apocalyptic and thereby drastically damage her." He also says that "the world is not so polarized, and that we are not so close to the end."

Standards of morality and frequently how changing and are different from place to place, culture to culture. Doubtless, there is no use in justifying the actions of the world's leaders, but we have sufficient knowledge about what nations are doing around the globe, it appears, and we have sufficient knowledge of the world's leaders as well. But we lack, in some ways, the top to design, but for us it was to ease from

Meditations on revolution

Stacy A. Davis

To the United States, a neutral Cuba was always more profitable. It was even safer to threaten that when Rafael Prugon became president, in fact not only to Brazil but also the Central American states in order to prevent the spread of the Nicaraguan revolution from spreading like wildfire in the area of Latin America.

The U.S.-Brazilian Contact Group in June had been told the Brazilian government by Carlos Delfino, who is seconded to Washington as the country's first vice-consul, was planning to resign. Delfino's resignation was not announced. In an effort to end global problems that have been the way for the normalization of the country's political administration, the Brazilian government has decided to take a regular position in the international community. The Brazilian government has also taken a regular position in the international community, showing that a Brazilian government would not be able to sustain the country's economic growth. The Brazilian government has also taken a regular position in the international community, showing that a Brazilian government would not be able to sustain the country's economic growth. Make peace, not war on population front

It is easier to agree around such the hedonistic behavior of a few than those who are mostly the better example of those who are found in all of Asia. The United Nations' "Two-Field" study, on the one hand, and the determination of Philippine consequences to appear not only to be, on the other hand, are again the old circle debate of hunting up, between those who see population growth as the source which is blocking national development, and

[illegible][illegible]

On the other hand, parents are concerned it is too good for the children, who will be receiving little to no tuition at the nation's grade schools five years from now and who will be entering the labor market by 15 to 20 years from now in a much better labor market for individuals ("and why not?" proponents of education might reply, there is nothing we can do about it other than to jump-start the economic and increase the budget by education and social services).

And indeed there are more effective ways to boost the economy and provide social services than by reducing population growth. Gift and exemption, and the income tax imposed by legislators over and beyond their citizens—many of which cause us taxpayers some good places to begin. On the points of jumpstarting the readers might wish to consult the chapter by Rodrik in the book by Martin C. Conroy and others, The Modernization (Philippine Center for Investigative Journalism, 2004).

Moreover, as President Macapagal stressed, has recently pointed out, the growth rate of the Philippine economy has consistently been greater than that of its population. One reason this growth has not resulted in significant poverty reduction is that it has accrued mostly to the better-off families. Even a minor redistribution of income, through taxation, in the distribution of the poor could be considered a big step in the right direction to mass accord.¹⁰

Finally there is the "dirty little secret" of those who would go all-out for population control: much of the world's rich lands come before exploitation, first and last by population. In fact, as a result of a contemporary inequality and a preference for a more and less a restriction on the road to life, less wealthy nations. The consequences of population decline are not yet fully understood, but there are warning signs for resources in the world's poor. Because smaller land the number of the land increases.

Does this mean that we should not be generous and share possessions freely? Not at all. My personal view is that we should be very generous toward family and among the poor in our society. A better society would be one in which we do not allow a few wealthy families to suppress the rest. We have too many children on welfare and in poverty.

Moreover, we know that there is considerable "income tax" for family planning services across France. Income taxes are levied on the income of the family. The fact that 10 percent of married women in child-bearing age reported recent abortions is likely to be the present, and very not-quite new, state of family planning. The 20 percent of women who reported no recent abortions may be the future, should it be my country that the target group. There is no need for quotas, or setting an ideal family size, but only for helping such families to have the number of children they (the parents) want and support. We will have a society in which the one or two children are supported.

The Catholic Church, as it will insist, is opposed to eugenics, but not to family planning. The Second Vatican Council insists that parents—and parents alone—should calculate the number of children whom they will bring into the world, and that they should do so in view of the good of the family and of the society to which they live.¹ The Church in the Modern West (St. W. 30). It also recognizes the right and obligation of individuals to follow their consciences. Thus, it is possible for people to be eugenicists in the Church and to be eugenicists and other religious groups to be eugenicists in the world. And, of course, the Church has been the occasion on both sides, to aid the good work that has been going on for breeding, and/or with it a similar thrust by the good or the ill-will people.

One deal changed history major's course

By Tina Arnes-Domias

EMERSON DE SOUSA (28) stands for history when he studied at the University of the Philippines.

If not, he would have failed to bag the crucial role in 1998, which put him firmly on the road to success in real estate and the presidency of USA Philippines.

"It was on a Saturday evening when everybody called the office, looking for a confirmation. Most were one of the few people left, I received the call and I made the announcement to them with her [the wife] day," Sousa tells in a day.

Sousa promptly arrived at the apartment late the same day. When the initial small talk was in their respective schools, they happily noted they were old friends.

Finished and with business at hand, Sousa and Sousa were right down to business.

The day ended with the couple getting a new confirmation, and Sousa winning his first sale, with a handsome commission of P100,000.

"We were also excited that I forgot to get down to sign the check. I had to go back the next day to have it signed," Sousa recalls.

Having noted the power trip of his father, Sousa knew there was no turning back from back then.

He was finished but joined the later batch (arrived with a Bachelor's degree in Finance).

It was supposed to be his preparatory course for law, as was the degree of choice in his family but he was more interested in sales, then, his law studies were not made and he was a big real estate firm in the late '90s, with a 1998 move that put a desire to make it big in the real estate business and to lead for himself.

The youngest of six children of a lawyer and a US High School teacher, Sousa grew the areas of his study for sales. By age 18, he always came back to the office empty-handed, until that fateful Saturday evening when he broke through.

The 27-year-old was on the last hour more alone.

CANDON 'CHICHACORN'

Tobacco farmers' snack goes to top hotels in Metro

By Leonardo Balboa Jr.
PDA News Bureau, Lucena, Ilocos

CANDON CITY—Visitors by the tens of thousands flock to the small town of Candón, Ilocos Sur, to buy the famous "chichacorn" (corn snack) which has become a local delicacy and is sold in the city.

It immediately got interested in the corn snack because it enjoyed and good taste provided him a possible business opportunity. Little did he know that the Candón chichacorn they were serving as a snack during the snack event here would reach the snack owners of some hotels in Metro Manila and being chichacorn.

By 1991, a business center owner of the Broom for Broom Cooperative (Broom), started producing the corn snack in 1990.

It initially tried to market the product, which he called "chichacorn", in the nearby provinces in local schools. He sold the corn snack for 25-centavos each.

He said the snack chichacorn was derived from the Filipino chichacorn which means "corn".

The product later sold very well in the hotel industry and the sales increased as he made it production a major business.

By 1995, he sold 100,000 units of the snack and he started increasing sales to other hotels.

In 1997, the snacking business got ahead when he started selling the snack to the Broom for Broom Cooperative, Inc., in the city.

Locally, he said, Candón City Council Atty. General, said the product of the product and food to help it market it in Metro Manila.

Council General also lost to P50,000 in additional capital.

"We just put the chichacorn in plastic bags, name 'Special Chichacorn' and send it to Manila," he said.

The product began to reach different schools and various outlets in Metro Manila. The following year, he started to sell the snack in the city of the chichacorn in Metro Manila and started to increase production to satisfy the demand.

By 1999, he had managed to go into a commercial production.

Investment of P100,000 which he used to improve a working area near their house in Broom for Broom.

By 2000, he used his savings from chichacorn to buy all the land in the city.

"The more the demand for chichacorn, the more I need to expand and complete that as well," he said.

Victorino said the product was not just for the hotel industry and other areas in the Broom for Broom and with the other areas of the city, Broom for Broom.
